Inti Raymi in Ibarra

Aya Uma, the most emblematic character and spiritual leader of the Inti Raymi celebration in Ibarra, Imbabura.

During this festival, we thank Pacha Mama and the Sun for the harvest with traditional dances, spiritual music, and delicious local food like mote, chicha, and cuy.

Last year, I joined the Sanjuanito dance circle with my community, but it was so exhausting

I should have practiced my dancing steps more before participating in the non-stop parade. Also, I could have invited my foreign friends so they could experience this magical energy, but I forgot to call them. I might have enjoyed the celebration even more if I hadn't lost my traditional hat during the crowd's energetic stamping.

I lived in the main community of San Antonio, I would participate in the spiritual rituals every single night. If more young people shared these ancestral customs on social media, our beautiful culture would survive for many generations.

It was a truly powerful experience that made me feel deeply proud of my Imbabura roots."
